

Site Health Report

- June 2026 -

Created for

Your website at a glance

Needs improvement

Uptime 100%

Pages checked

24

How many pages we found

Internal links scanned

168

Your links to your own pages

External links scanned

146

Links to other websites

Images checked

24

How many images you have

Issues to review

8

Small areas to address

Critical issues

1

Major problems to resolve

Key areas of improvement

● Issues to review

Your website is generally healthy, but a few small improvements would make it clearer and easier to find in search. Some page titles could be shortened or made more descriptive, and a few pages may have repeated main headings. One image needs its description checking, and a small number of service or news pages could load faster on mobile. These are not urgent problems, but fixing them would help visitors, improve search clarity and give the site a more polished feel.

● Critical issues

The main critical issue found is that some important links from 80five point to UpWatch pages that no longer exist. This includes links to the old free website audit page and the old products page, both of which return 404 errors. These links matter because they are part of a commercial journey, sending visitors from 80five towards related services on UpWatch. If someone clicks them, they may reach a dead end instead of the intended page, which could damage trust or lose an enquiry. These should be fixed first by updating the links to the current UpWatch pages, such as the relevant features, pricing, contact or resource page.

This report provides an independent overview of your website's health for the reporting period shown. It highlights issues and priorities, but does not make changes to your website.

This report is based on automated checks and observations carried out at the time of testing. While care is taken to ensure accuracy, results may vary due to changes made after the report date, third party services, or limitations of automated testing.

Got any questions?

Email us: hello@upwatch.co.uk